Camber Aviation Management Focuses on Completion Management

Camber Aviation Management, a leading global provider of corporate jet cabin completion management and technical advisory services, announced that company co-founder and completions specialist, Tom Chatfield has taken the role of CEO.

Since the inception of Camber six years ago, Tom Chatfield has demonstrated his 35 years' experience working in the aviation industry to be of significant value to the company's important clientele. A trained avionics technician holding Transport Canada and EASA Aircraft Maintenance Engineer licences, with a MSc in Airline Transport Management from Cranfield University, Mr. Chatfield is characterised by his professionalism, technical insight and solutions-oriented approach.

"Camber is not in the business of buying or selling business jets, instead we are a team of expert completion managers, that guide and manage the incredibly complex process of transforming a large aircraft into a bespoke corporate jet" said Mr. Chatfield. "We work for our client, ensuring that the finished cabin surpasses their expectations for comfort, style and performance, while delivering on time and budget. We pride ourselves in delivering the best corporate jet possible, individually tailored to the requirements of our ultra-high net worth individuals, corporate and heads of state clientele."
